Has responsive design killed Photoshop for web designers?

Is it really appropriate for web designers to use tools like Photoshop or Fireworks when designing websites that have to adapt to a variety of screen sizes?

Is Photoshop dead?

Feb. 14, 2013 | Photoshop | 46 comments

I guess a more suitable title might be 'is Photoshop still an appropriate tool for designing typography on the web?' But that lacks the dramatic appeal of the above.

Like many of you, I have always used Photoshop to create mock-up compositions of my designs. For as long as I can remember it has been the industry standard and the software of choice for most designers I have worked with. I have spent weeks designing pixel perfect layouts, grouping elements into hierarchical folders and labelling all of my layers to make the

8 REASONS TO STOP USING PHOTOSHOP FOR WEB DESIGN

October 2, 2013

By Michelle Schulp

Judging by the amount of love it gets in all the design media, it seems like Photoshop is the perfect design tool. Designers and Photoshop go together like Peanut Butter and Jelly, it's the holy grail of design productivity, you can use it to build anything your heart desires, and it will slice, dice, and make you a sandwich while walking your dog and waxing your car.

All kidding aside, a program that was once initially built as a photo editor and image manipulator (and a great one, at that) has slowly evolved into a bloated, sluggish, and overstuffed Swiss Army Knife sort of tool that tries to be everything to everyone. But the thing

You should design experiences. And not pretty looking single screens on photoshop.

layers

Arguably the biggest source of angst amongst PSD inheritors, messy and unnamed layers suck the fun out of any situation. If you do nothing else, name your layers!

⊕ Name Layers & Be Accurate

🐦 Be as descriptive as possible on every layer. “Layer o copy copy” isn’t gonna cut it.

⊕ Use Folders

🐦 Grouping layers makes it easy to show/hide various areas quickly.

⊕ Delete Unnecessary Layers

🐦 Are you a layer hoarder? It’s OK to get rid of all the unused layers from your PSD.

⊕ Globalize Common Elements

🐦 No reason to have 5 copies of the logo for different layouts. Globalize it on a master

WHY? The quintessential piece of etiquette: naming your layers instantly decreases confusion and improves acclimation to an otherwise unfamiliar document.

I can't design in the browser

FEBRUARY 21, 2012

It's a guilty secret I've been harbouring for about a year, I cannot design directly into the browser. My creative brain switches at the point when I open my html/css editor (Espresso), and starts thinking in terms of structure and how to achieve the look of my design using as much native CSS as possible. If I don't have my design to follow, the whole process breaks down for me. I've tried, goodness knows I've tried, but my designs end up suffering, looking boxy, bland and uninspiring.

Once upon a time this would not have been a problem, as much as it is today. With the rise of responsive/adaptive design (I still prefer adaptive but hey, tomato tomatoe) but it's just not doable to produce endless Photoshop comps for every breakpoint. Photoshop comps have been a pain in the bottom at the best of times. A client saying "Can I just change that blue, to a slightly different shade" invoking fear amongst Photoshoppers, whilst designers-in-the-browser laugh at our stone-age tools. Aside- Why Adobe have never implemented global changes a'la InDesign, I'll never know. Seconds later, they have a new blue, across an entire site while we sit changing manually. It's a labor intensive process at times.

So what's the answer? I'm still trying to find it. For some projects, a hybrid method of producing a type of scratch file, with a general overview of the style and colours of the app/website, then going straight into HTML/CSS has worked, in others, I still need to produce full-scale visuals. Visuals that are slowly becoming less and less useful as they adhere to a fixed canvas size.

“I’ve tried, goodness knows I’ve tried, but my designs end up suffering, looking boxy, bland and uninspiring.”

JASONFORAL.COM/COMPOSER

A prototyping tool for animation and interaction on desktop and mobile.

Framer can help you to quickly build interactions and animations. Built for designers and integrates with Photoshop. Great alternative to Quartz Composer, Flash or Keynote.

Photoshop

Framer integrated with Photoshop to quickly export assets and set up a project.

Performance

Hardware accelerated for high frame rates. Based on CSS keyframes.

Animation

Animate any view in full 3D space with spring physics and bezier curves.

Flexible

Works well for desktop, mobile and tablets. Plays well with the rest of the browser.

Composite

A new, delightful way of designing apps with Photoshop®

Composite is a brand new way of creating interactive prototypes. It automatically connects to your Photoshop® documents and converts your mockups into interactive prototypes in seconds. No need to export images or maintain tons of hotspots.

 Download on the App Store $9⁹⁹

 See how it works

Requires iOS 6 or later and Photoshop CS6+.
Works with both Windows & Mac OS X.

“Composite could be the ultimate iPhone app prototyping tool for Photoshop”

Photoshop Actions & Workflow

Over the last few years I've built a set of Actions that I use every day, but more importantly, they remove the need to remember them.

Enable Pixel Snapping (F15) and Disable Pixel Snapping (shift+F15)

These enable and disable Snap Vector Tools and Transforms to Pixel Grid in Photoshop.

Please note that you need Photoshop CS6 for these actions to function. I probably use them 10 times a day.

New iPhone and iPad document Actions

These Actions create new documents at non-Retina or Retina device sizes, at 72PPI with a white background, a black rectangle to show where the status bar goes, and no colour profile.

Yes, 72PPI is probably the best pixel density of your documents — here's why.

Make vector path from bitmap selection

March 14, 2013 19 notes #tips #path #vector #mask #bitmap #convert

Every wish you could convert a selection into a vector? Well you can!!

Make a selection with Marquee tool, then go to Window > Path and click this icon:

Although Illustrator's LivePaint generally works best as there are more controls, this Photoshop option can work well sometimes, especially with simpler shapes!
